

Civil unrest

ACTION CHECKLIST

If violence or dangerous crowd movement is near you, leave the immediate area by a safe route or shelter in a secure place if travel is unsafe. Check local alerts, road closures, and transit changes. Avoid confrontation and keep a way to contact the people you need to reach.

[] Separate the event from your location

Check what is happening on your route, not just citywide headlines. Peaceful assembly and a nearby dangerous incident are different conditions.

[] Choose a safe path

Move away from active violence and blocked roads. If there is no safe exit, shelter inside, away from windows, and update a trusted contact.

[] Stay informed

Use official local notices for curfews, transport changes, and emergency services, and verify unconfirmed social posts before acting.

[] Regroup deliberately

Arrange a meeting point and a backup contact if mobile networks are strained. Wait for reliable updates before returning to a disrupted area.

WATCH FOR

Do not assume a protest is violent or that a citywide alert applies equally to every neighborhood. If an order applies, read its location, hours, and exceptions.

Updated 2026-10-02 | General guidance. Follow current local instructions. In immediate danger, contact emergency services.

Full guide: <https://ospreyzero.com/emergencies/civil-unrest/>

U.S. State Department · Global events and travel

Ready.gov · Emergency alerts